PIECES OF WISDOM

We asked our graduates: Where do you see that your vision for your life wants to go next?

I'm a writer, happily writing materials for consultants to deliver transformation and bringing inquiry from my Wisdom training. And I'm always keeping my eyes open - if I see something I like better, I'll go do that! The Old English meaning of bequest is "a speaking": I want to leave a powerful conversation. My bequest will be really good materials for people to use for transforming the world.

— Nancy Chek, Wisdom Graduate

I've really committed to, am dedicated to, love the work of Landmark. I like the access to Being, and I continue to develop myself in listening, expecting a life of miracles and being a clearing for others to have miraculous results. Helping people to create extraordinary results in their lives out of their calls with me and to have the capacity to choose in ways never before is fulfilling my vision.

— John Corbiere, Listener Team & Assisting Team with Consultants

I am a little more than a year from being an empty nester, which occurs as an exciting adventure for my daughter and also for me to design the next thing. It absolutely frees up a new place to play and be creative. I published a book last year on financial literacy for medical groups and created a non-profit to train doctors in financial literacy for their practices. When money is handled, it creates space for other things to be handled, and I'm mindfully designing the next chapter.
