Sharing: Access To Engaging the World

My first job after completing my Ph.D. was with Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organisation, the premier research organization in Australia. I was introverted, a thinker and, let us be honest, socially insensitive. I was always overprepared for meetings, and I'd arrive with five to 10 pages of solutions to agenda items. I would walk into those meetings with these important scientists, present my solutions; and no one listened. I was talking to myself. I wasn't with them or interested in them; I was only interested in my solutions. You could say I wasn't sharing. What I learned from these early interactions is that authentic sharing is an important part of breaking through to participate in creating solutions.

Another story: I'm married to a wonderful person and I've always been amazed at her ability to share with others. When she travels on the commuter train, she will frequently have a conversation with somebody, anybody. Often, sharing happens. There are many times she has brought someone she met on the train home for dinner, so they can meet our friends. I ask, "Who are they?" She replies, "I met them on the train. They were speaking Spanish; I spoke Spanish back to them. They are newly in Australia so I thought we might as well have a Spanish-speaking dinner." So far as I can tell, it's in the sharing that we celebrate being, and it's in sharing that I get to love my wife for being herself.

In exploring the power of sharing, I discovered my own success, my love for my wife, and that I am only at the beginning of an inquiry into sharing: moments of creating where I get to be really alive and experience the miraculous nature of the world.

I look forward to exploring and discovering the wonder of sharing with you this year. We invite you to submit a paper or other contribution for the 2026 Conference for Global Transformation that speaks to sharing and sharing's relationship to the fulfillment of your commitment for the world.

Thank you for listening,
Gary Kendrick

In your investigation, you might consider:

- When it comes to sharing, are there some things you discovered that work? What are they? What are some of the reliable practices you have found to keep you engaged, or to expand sharing?
- How do you generate and maintain an integrity that allows sharing to be itself while you are up to causing results and fulfilling your commitment for the world? How does manipulation relate to sharing?
- Who do you share your commitment for the world with, and with whom are you unwilling to share your commitment for the world? Contribution, sharing, and listening are always risky; in the face of such risk, how have you managed sharing?
- What has been accomplished by people who have taken on the opportunities you have shared?
- What are some of the reliable practices you have found to expand sharing or keep you engaged?

JOURNAL CONTRIBUTIONS

Papers

Submissions close September 1, 2025

Authors must be registered for the 2026 conference before submitting a paper for the Journal of the Conference for Global Transformation. Journal papers provide authors with an opportunity to articulate their research, inquiries, ideas, practices, philosophies, views, work, artistic endeavors, successes, and failures on topics related to the theme of the conference as expressed in this Call for Papers & Other Contributions. Submissions must be completed drafts of original work (with proper documentation when drawing on the ideas of others). The body of the paper should be no longer than 5,000 words. If a paper is submitted that is longer than 5,000 words, the editor may choose to return it without it being reviewed. Papers are reviewed by an editorial committee, and publication in the Journal of the Conference for Global Transformation may be subject to recommended revisions. To submit your paper, go to WisdomCGT.com and click on "Contribute Content," where you can find all of the submission guidelines and formatting requirements. You will be advised of acceptance by October 18, 2025.

Awards. The authors of the three top papers will be invited to present a joint workshop at the conference.

Reports from the Field

Submissions close January 15, 2026

Authors must be registered for the 2026 conference before submitting a report from the field for the Journal of the Conference for Global Transformation. A report from the field is an opportunity to contribute to others by sharing about living with, and engaging in, your commitments for the world. We invite you to submit a report of up to 1,500 words about what you have discovered, accomplished, or learned regarding your commitments. For more information or to submit your report, go to WisdomCGT.com and click on "Contribute Content," where you can find all of the submission guidelines and formatting requirements. You will be advised of acceptance by February 28, 2026.

LIVE PRESENTATIONS

Workshops

Submissions close September 1, 2025

Workshops, typically led by one to three people, are intended to have participants investigate topics related to the theme of the conference. Successful sessions tend to include inquiry and provide access to new contexts, thinking, ideas, practices, and performance regarding matters the session leaders and participants care about, are committed to, or wish to make real in the world. Workshops can also be panel presentations with three to six people giving short presentations on topics related to the theme of the conference. The presentations may be followed by questions, discussion, or inquiry.

Eligibility. Each workshop or panel session presenter must have attended the Conference for Global Transformation as a registered participant at least once prior and be registered for the 2026 conference before submitting a workshop proposal. Submit your proposal online at WisdomCGT.com. Click on "Contribute Content," where you can find all of the submission guidelines. You will be advised of acceptance by November 1, 2025.

VIDEO CONTRIBUTIONS

Artists for Global Transformation

Individual Submissions close January 15, 2026

We invite proposals from artists to show their work in a video, which will be displayed on the conference YouTube channel. Submissions should address the conference theme and will be selected by an independent panel. Artists must be registered for the 2026 conference before submitting a video proposal. This is an opportunity for Landmark graduates to impact a global audience with their art. To submit your proposal, go to WisdomCGT.com. Click on "Contribute Content," where you can find all of the submission guidelines. You will be advised of acceptance by February 14, 2026. Final videos will be due no later than by April 1, 2026.

Collaborative Videos

Register your interest by January 15, 2026

We are inviting three or more artists of all mediums to participate – composers, choreographers, dancers, designers, mathematicians, musicians, painters, poets, producers, scientists, vocalists, weavers, and writers – to create a collaborative video that brings together multiple cultures, genres, styles, ideals, and values. Participating artists must be registered in the 2026 conference before submitting their expression of interest. Videos should be no longer than five minutes, and all intellectual property, including images and music included in the video, must be owned by the contributing artists. Submissions will be reviewed for acceptance at the discretion of a selection committee. To express your interest in participating in a collaborative group, go to WisdomCGT.com. Click on "Contribute Content," here you can find all of the submission guidelines. Collaborative groups will be finalized by February 14, 2026. Final videos will be due no later than by April 1, 2026.

Poster Videos

Submissions close February 1, 2026

We invite proposals for poster videos that address the conference theme or any other aspect of formulating and implementing a commitment for the world. Posters are displayed as videos and are an opportunity to present whatever you are at work on, things you have discovered, learned, or accomplished, including issues you are encountering or ideas you have. Poster presenters (including any co-presenters) must be registered for the 2026 conference before submitting a proposal. For more information and to submit your written proposal, go to WisdomCGT.com. Click on "Contribute Content," where you can find all of the submission guidelines. You will be advised of acceptance no later than February 18, 2026. Videos will be due no later than April 15, 2026.
